

The four facettes represent genotypes A, B, C and D. Black dots represent raw data. Red dots and error bars represent adjusted means with 95% confidence limits per cultivar. For each genotype separately, means followed by a common letter are not significantly different according to the Tukey-test.